Early experiments using passive transfer of human IgG from pemphigus patients into mice demonstrated dose-dependent recapitulation of human pathology. Consequently, Fc-dependent mechanisms are dispensable in pemphigus pathophysiology, and autoantibodies directly mediate disease by interfering with the interaction of desmoglein molecules on the outside of keratinocytes, either by interference with homophilic trans- or cis-interaction of Dsg molecules. Figure 8 - Interestingly, Dsg3-specific T cells have also been demonstrated to cause cutaneous pathology by inducing interface dermatitis when injected into lymphocyte-deficient mice. Figure 8. Human diversity and population genetics As blood typing gained some traction in legal medicine, it became a key instrument in several large-scale population-level genetics studies launched in Brazil after World War II.
