Some autoantibodies inhibit AChR function by direct blockage of acetylcholine ACh binding sites, but these appear to play a minor role. No cellular infiltration at the target muscle tissue of MG patients indicates that tissue damage is not caused by direct harmful effects of cytotoxic cells. However, these autoantibodies are not pathogenic because the cytoplasmic domain of AChR is not accessible to these autoantibodies in intact muscle. The risk or severity of adverse effects can be increased when Nitrous oxide is combined with Opium.
